1 ABSTRACT

This report mainly aims at exploring the vice of campus violence around Makerere university. This research was mainly conducted at the college of computing and information sciences at Makerere university. I collected all the data I needed using the ODK collect application installed on my Android device and the results I obtained truly indicated that most students around Makerere at the computing college to be specific were not very much aware of the vice. This research has widened my knowledge about campus violence and I hope my findings will facilitate further more research on this topic.

2 INTRODUCTION

Campus violence can be defined in many perspectives ranging from stalking, hazing, theft to sexual violence and assault. Violence in particular is an act of using physical force or power against oneself or another person that results in injury, death, psychological harm and maldevelopment. This has been a general issue of recent in Makerere but the university management together with concerned parties like police have done their best to curb the vice out of its territories. This report paper consists of the methodology section, my findings I obtained from the data I collected, conclusions together with the recommendations.

3 METHODOLOGY

I interacted with many people on the issue of campus violence in Makerere university. I asked questions ranging from their knowledge about the vice to their experiences if any of them have been victims of this syndrome. I recorded my conversation with them and many were very cooperative and their responses were unbiased. I also took out photos of the respondents as you can really see them below are some of the respondents I managed to interact with on the issue of campus violence.

4 FINDINGS

According to the people i interacted with around the college of computing of computing and information sciences, I found out many students have been victims of circumstances of campus violence. Most of the cases I recorded were theft most especially in halls of residence for resident students and the other issue was stalking most especially for the freshers. Furthermore I found out that this brings about emotional or psychological injury and greatly affects their academics standards and a barrier to their careers. According to the the results I obtained, most of 10 people of every 30 people you ask have ever faced campus violence in one way or another. Also most of the students who are victims are introverts in that they don't express their concerns to the authorities giving a reason that they don't expect any help from the authorities in order to get justice. The following table summarizes some information I managed to collect about campus violence around Makerere university.

Type of violence	Victims for every 10 people	Percentage
Theft	8	80
Stalking	5	50
Sexual Assault	4	40
Hazing	3	30

5 CONCLUSIONS

I think it is extremely important to have protocols in place for conveying information regarding dangerous situations and threats, search and seizure, culprits so that they can face the law and bring justice to victims. A strong emphasis must be placed on increasing staff and student awareness of policies and procedures to curb the vice.

6 RECOMMENDATIONS

Encouraging students/staff to report verbal and written threats, weapons, and bizarre behaviors.

Implementing tougher sanctions, including expulsion/suspension for serious misconduct.

Creating zero tolerance policies for campus violence.
